

Brandon Buchanan
November 28, 2006
Random Letter 4

I think that this group project has been a very helpful experience in helping me get a feel for how group projects should be handled throughout my college career. I have learned that it is very pertinent to keep in touch with all group members, and to make note of what work has or has not been completed.

I think that the group project has went very well. Everyone was well disciplined enough to get all of the work done on time, minus a couple times when our specific deadlines were not met, but we still had all work completed to turn in. I enjoyed having random discussions at times when we met, which made us stray from topic, but also helped us to get to know each other better, and allow a more open forum for ideas. I was very surprised that our group was the only group to have all requirements fulfilled for the turning in of the rough draft. I think that shows that our group kept focus.

As a group member, I was a very model member. I called everyone more than anyone else to make sure that work was being done. I also was the main editor of the paper, since I write very well. I also tried to keep meetings and work fun, so that the work did not seem as bad.

As a group, I do not think that I would change much. We were very adamant about completing the work with the smallest complications possible. The thing that I would change would be the topic. At first, we all thought that internet law would not be a difficult topic to write about, however, when we began writing our papers, we realized that the topic was very broad, and that it was very hard to narrow down the topics within that spectrum. Though this has been a great experience, I am glad that it is finally over.