

Brandon Buchanan
September 26, 2006
Random Letter 3

I enjoy when I can just write about myself and the amazing things I have done. I am not that self-obsessed actually. I am currently still living in my parent's house. I dissent the fact that it is in Kingsport because it is a hassle to drive back and forth between school and home. As you already know, I work at Bailey Computing as have been there for three months. I do the work the other technicians do not want to do. Actually, I enjoy my job and am very glad I have been given the opportunity to work there. When I am not in school, I am working, so during the week, I am very busy. I am a total geek. Anyone who spends five minutes with me could figure that out. I currently am a Cisco Certified Network Associate and will soon be a Cisco Certified Design Associate. I also competed in the Business Professionals of America national competition and placed 12th in Cisco Systems Administration and 4th in Network Design Team. Ming Ng and Travis Clamon were part of the team. We are testing the waters of making a BPA chapter at ETSU and compete again this year. I am proud of each one of these achievements as it has helped me to decide what to do. I am trying to shape my education so that I can become a network security specialist. I am still slowly finding out how college is having an impact on me. My boyfriend and I are finding out what it is like to have to be around each other more than we used to be. We never fought much until college started and we started spending more time together. I know that we will get through it, though. We have been together more than ten months, and only until about a month ago, we started to really get on each other's nerves. We both share the task of annoying the other. There is a lot more about me that I could ramble on about, but I do not want to seem self-obsessed. I am happy where I am at in life right now, but I am always striving to do something better so that I can exceed my goals.